

THE CLOTHES FOR THE BUSY MAN

are clothes that will not keep him waiting a week before he can walk out in them. Are you conversant with STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES? So many shrewd judges of top-notch tailoring have been keeping us busy fitting them out that we are pretty sure you understand a good deal about the superiority of these crack clothes over the general run of custom-carpentered duds and the foundry-built species of "ready-made" things. If not, you are making a mistake, and we hope we have caught you in time.

Our Spring and Summer assortment of these STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES is so broad in style and pattern that it would require considerable imagination to think up something that we can't show you, especially in business and sack suits.

just inquire for this label when you come in:

A $15,000 SANATORIUM FOR THE KAIMUKI TRACT

Private Hospital will be Built to Suit Needs of Tropical Climate, and will be Advertised Extensively in Europe.

Plans are being prepared for a new $15,000 private sanatorium which will be built somewhere on the Kaimuki tract, this being looked upon as a most desirable place for a hospital.

The plans are being gotten out by architect W. Matlock Campbell, only a rough sketch having been made as yet. Lung troubles will be especially cared for, although the hospital or sanatorium is not built with a view to treating these cases only.

The sanatorium will be two stories in height surrounded by wide verandas and built with Hawaii's tropical climate taken into consideration. The wide verandas are intended to give the interior freedom from heat. Wide hallways dividing the structure will open to the roof and will be covered with ventilators.

The gentleman back of the enterprise is a foreigner and the sanatorium will be advertised extensively in Europe as being in a climate which is beneficial to invalids. In fact it will be his purpose to advertise the sanatorium as being located in the "Riviera of the Pacific."

SCALING THE HIGHEST PEAK OF WAIANAE RANGE

The climb up Kaala, the highest peak on Oahu, which, through the trail cut recently by the Haleiwa Hotel management, is comparatively easy, offers one of the most picturesque trips on the Hawaiian Islands. If the dweller in Honolulu looks at the Waianae range, to the westward of Pearl Lochs, he will see rising high above the rest of its brethren a flat-topped peak—in fact the outline of the summit is as perfectly horizontal as is that of far-famed Table Mountain of Cape Town. This is Kaala, "The Perfumed Peak," which rises 4030 feet above the sea. The new trail passes through the great Waialua plantation, which it leaves at one of the reservoirs that wise management is placing in every available locality, thence winding along grass covered ridges, with here and there scattered clumps of lantana and guava bushes. Ancient cattle trails everywhere show that this was once a great grazing country, while thousands of young koa and kukui trees springing up in all directions prove that the reforestation of the island can be accomplished naturally by simply shutting out the cattle. Higher and higher we climb, terra firma becoming more and more rugged and picturesque. On a knoll a half dozen young pheasants fly off with an angry whirr, their number and plump condition making the sportsmen of the party long for the 15th of September. After following the summit of a long ridge or "hog-back" we descend into a swale filled with guava bushes which are loaded with ripe fruit. The leading horse snorts jumping to one side, as five young squealing wild boars tear madly down into the gulch. A hasty shot with a revolver is unproductive of any result beyond the hastening of the speed of the porkers, if that be possible. From here the climb begins in earnest, the trail zigzagging up the face of an almost perpendicular cliff, but so cleverly has it been planned that the most nervous of us can ascend with ease. After about a half an hour of this the puffing quadrupeds bring us to the top of a long ridge which in graceful curves leads almost in a direct line to the summit of the peak itself. We traverse this for over half a mile, constantly ascending, coming at last to an abrupt drop in the ridge that makes further riding impossible. Tying up the animals we commence the real work of the day, climbing upward, ever upward every step bringing us nearer to the forest, which looks cool and inviting. The sudden bleating of wild goats from the ridge opposite causes all to pause but look as we would we could not see a sign of the spiral horned mountain climbers. A shot from the revolver, a 45 cal. Colt, which reverberated back and forth across the ocean, started them however, and we could see a dozen or more hastily climbing the cliffs opposite. They stopped for a last look on the top of a crag and then disappeared from view. From the appearance of the ridge up which we are travelling it was the home of Goatdom, trails and fresh signs being apparent everywhere. When timber was reached we found it cool enough, but the tangled tree fern and other tropical vegetation did not help us much, the canteen filled with spring water being much in demand. Gorgeous orange, pink and varied colored flowers unknown in the lowlands greeted us, while a shrub, the leaves of which gave forth a delicious aromatic odor perfumed the air. Up and still up until we entered the clouds, the swirling volumes of mist cutting off all view for some time. At last, after climbing over a knoll, we entered upon what was to all appearances a broad plateau, covered by a most luxuriant tropical jungle which would have been impossible except for the trail recently cut. When our guide said, "The top," an audib's sigh of relief could be heard from the long line of Alpine climbers extending in single file far back into the dense fog. Shortly the clouds began to feel the effect of the trade wind and as they lifted we found that we were in reality on top of the great plateau on Kaala, where, although on top of the highest peak on Oahu, we could see nothing but a flat field covered with impenetrable jungle. A short walk brought us to a small pond, filled with rain water, out of which rose at our approach a score of quacking Hawaiian ducks, the revolver as usual simply awakening silence and hastening flight. A hundred yards or so more and we were on the eastern summit, where we had a gorgeous panoramic view—to the left Waihala, the Koolau range and Lihalehua ranch, in the distance Pearl Lochs, Honolulu, Diamond Head, Koko Head and far beyond, while to the right the great Waianae range with its serrated peaks and perpendicularly walled valleys with Waianae and the broad Pacific beyond. The sight was worth a trip many times as hard and all sat drinking in the gorgeous view. After a rest the canteens were replenished at the little lake and the downward trip commenced. This, travelling over the same ground, was without incident except that the clear atmosphere permitted of a superb view of Waialua, Halemano, Laulu, Waimea and far beyond. Stopping at Ah Chew's store, a half a dozen delicious water-melons were purchased which were speedily devoured by the hungry and thirsty mountain climbers. A canter over the excellent coral road brought us to the beautiful Haleiwa Hotel, where a plunge in the swimming pool prepared us to do full justice to the excellent dinner served by Manager Church. For those who want a pleasant outing where they can see Hawaii as nature made her, we strongly advise a trip up Kaala from the Haleiwa side.
